Somewhere High Above Birmingham

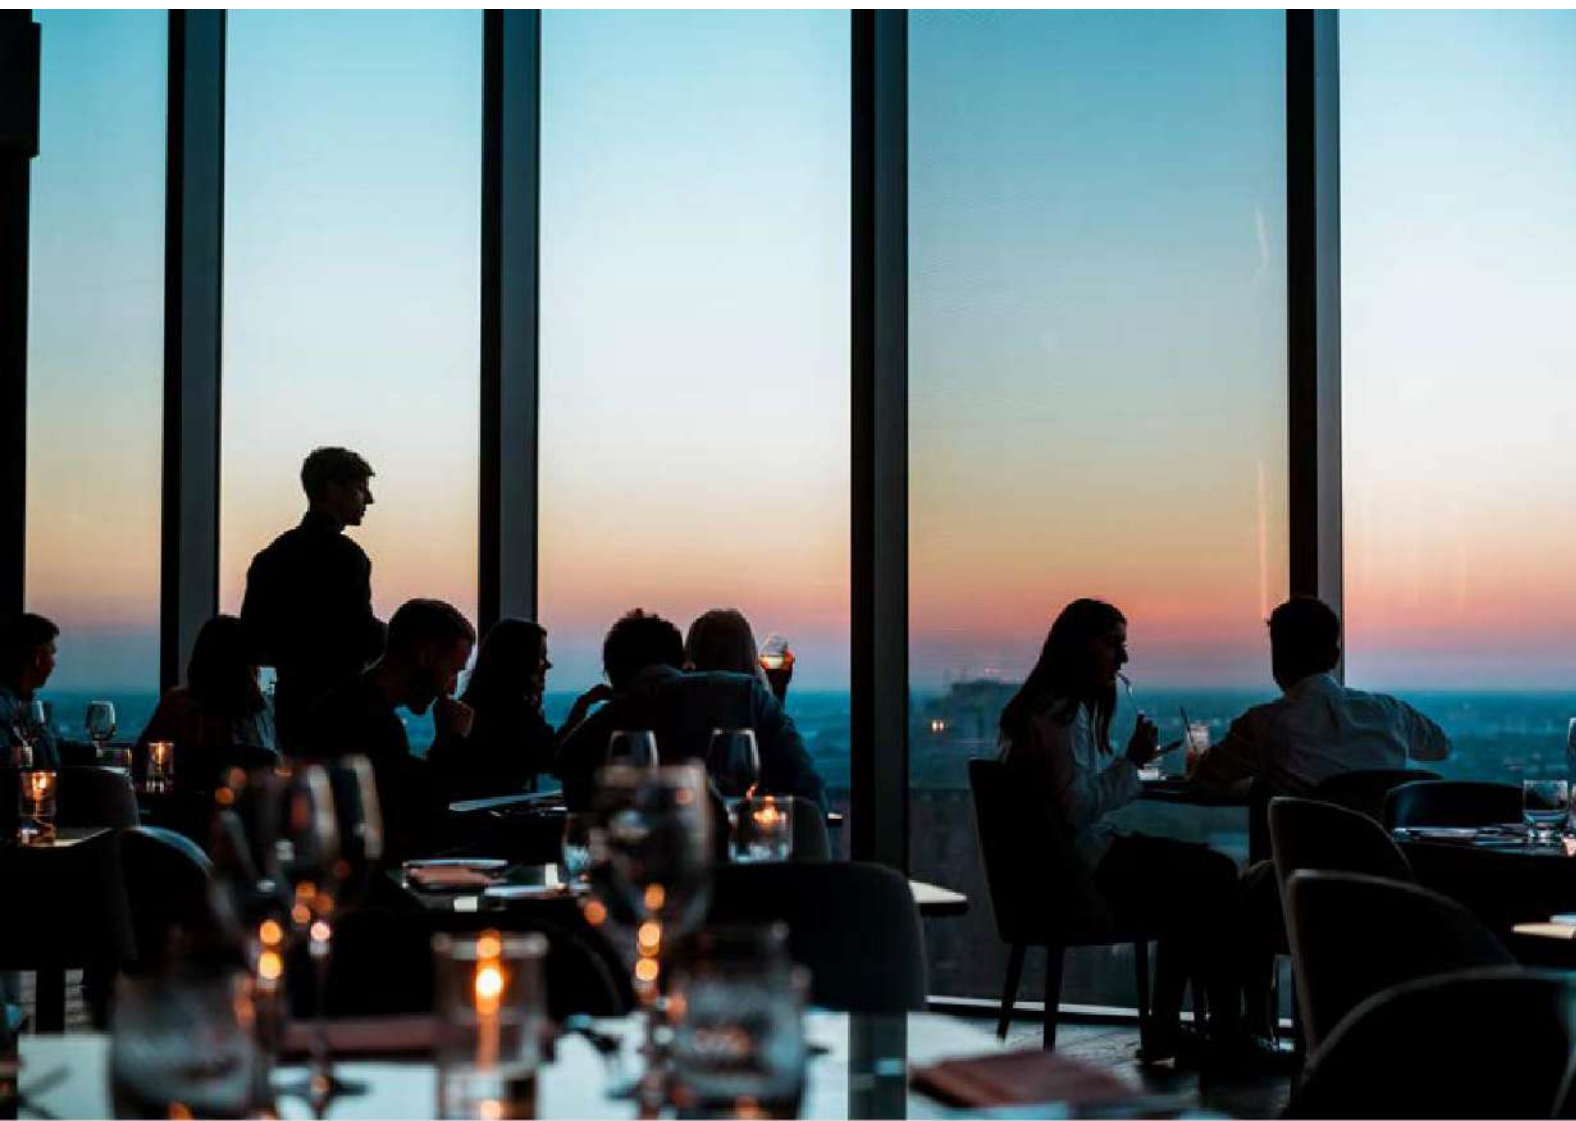

103 Colmore Row, the tallest building in Birmingham, is a 230,084 square ft Grade A building at the very centre of Birmingham's bustling business district.

24 Stories, situated on the 24th floor of 103 Colmore, offers panoramic views across the city and beyond.

103 Colmore Row, formally known as National Westminster House, was designed by John Madin and was completed in October 1975 as offices and a banking hall for Natwest. The building includes the original aluminium-cast banking doors, created and made by Henry Haig, an English abstract artist, painter and sculptor.

The newest Evolv Collection addition comprises a 24th floor restaurant & bar, and ground floor all-day café & terrace serving a menu of modern British Cuisine
